

Photovoltaic panel contract penalty

Overview

Most solar leasing companies offer 30 days after contract signing to cancel without penalty—though this period varies by provider and state regulations. Some states mandate longer cooling-off periods for home improvement contracts. These contracts, whether a lease, loan, or Power Purchase Agreement (PPA), carry different obligations and consequences for termination. Rather than canceling, you typically have options like transferring the lease to a new homeowner, buying out the contract, or purchasing the system at fair. Whether or not you can cancel a solar panel contract after installation depends on the terms and conditions outlined in the contract itself, whether the company has breached any of these terms, and whether they have complied with federal, state, and local laws. Discuss your termination fees with your solar company. Many people wonder about their rights and the possible penalties.
